What are the axiomatic truths upon which all human life may rest with confidence? They are not many:

Only God is great.

Only God is wise.

Apart from God, nothing matters.

Only what we do in God will remain to us at last.

Human sin is real.

With God there is forgiveness.

Only what God protects is safe.

A. W. TOZER (1897–1963)

Christian life, then, is liberty, the liberation of the person from the trammels imposed by external influences. It is the rising of the sap from within. It is life under God's leadership. It is a balance between prayer and action: between the dialogue in which his creative inspiration is sought, and the bold and confident affirmation of self, in which the inspiration received is put into practice.

PAUL TOURNIER (1898–1986)
